

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

OSTP SWORM Activities

Jinni Meehan

Assistant Director for Space Policy

Executive Office of the President

Office of Science and Technology Policy

NASA Space Weather Council Meeting

February 22, 2024

White House Office of Science and Technology Policy

harnessing the power of science, technology, and innovation to achieve America's greatest aspirations

In an effort to advance a more equitable and prosperous science and technology ecosystem in the United States, the Biden-Harris Administration has championed transformative investments in science and technology across the nation.

OSTP's mission includes:

- Providing advice to the President and the Executive Office of the President on matters related to science and technology
- Strengthening and advancing American science and technology
- Working with federal departments and agencies and with Congress to create bold visions; unified strategies; clear plans; wise policies; and effective, equitable programs for science and technology
- Engaging with external partners, including industry, academia, philanthropic organizations, and civil society; state, local, Tribal and territorial governments; and other nations
- Ensuring equity, inclusion, and integrity in all aspects of science and technology

White House Office of Science and Technology Policy Space Weather Operations, Research, & Mitigation Subcommittee

Overview of Implementation Plan of the National Space Weather Strategy & Action Plan

- Objective 1: Enhance the protection of national security, homeland security, and commercial assets and operations against the effects of space weather.
 - 27 Actions
- Objective 2: Develop and disseminate accurate and timely information of space weather characterization and forecasts.
 - 49 Actions
- Objective 3: Establish plans and procedures for responding to and recovering from space weather events.
 - 17 Actions

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Thank you! Any Questions?

Jennifer.L.Meehan@ostp.eop.gov

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

WH.GOV